

I have had XM radio since October 2002 and thoroughly enjoy it. I can't wait for traffic and weather to start. Here, in Atlanta, where we have to drive so often constant traffic updates are of extreme importance. Outside of the time-saving factor, knowing which areas to avoid also reduces pollution. I see no reason for the FCC to limit me from having this added to the services I'm already willing to pay for. No other means are presently available other than occasional updates on regular radio.
